Gregory Fraser is Associate Professor of English at the University of West Georgia, USA

Davidson is Associate Professor of English at the University of West Georgia, USA.

There are many good books out there that teach students how to read critically and interpret insightfully. The strength of this one is that Fraser and Davidson take the time to explain how textual meaning is made. In an age when too many students "find" the meaning of a text by looking it up on SparkNotes or Wikipedia, this book gives students hands-on, practical advice for using questions and reading procedures that they can begin using immediately to figure out a text's meaning on their own. Fraser and Davidson's advice is illustrated with examples taken from a variety of fields including literature, film, and graphic arts. Highly recommended for introductory college writing, English, film, etc. courses.
