No other guide whets your appetite quite like this one The Independent

The DK Guide trumps every other book on this region. The next best is Lonely Planet which has more detailed information on bus/train schedules to each city. Prague is extensively covered in the DK book but it is the smaller towns that can be even more tantalizing to experienced travelers. The book begins with areas of interest: landscape and wildlife, architecture, music, decorative arts, literature, highlights of each month, and history. Then it takes each region and breaks it down by city: history, the details, photos, town map, suggested walking tour with highlights, and cross sections of major buildings. Since you don't have time to see everything, this really helps you pick the best of what you are interested in that will fit with your routing. This is what a travel guide should be, not an infomercial for expensive hotels and restaurants. In the back you will find an abbreviated list of both groups which will also clue you into the price ranges. I would go with Lonely Planet's choices first for cheaper locations and Fodor's if you want to go first class.
