Customer Reviews

Hector Miray is a geeky pastor from North Carolina. He loves a good story, hopes he is living one, and wants to help others do the same. This is his 3rd book.

Thanks to the ministry Geeks Under Grace, I was introduced to the first book of this series by Hector Miray. I was super excited to finally see someone explore this concept of bringing up Christianity found in geek culture from the start. Now that Level 3 finally includes Star Wars inspired sections into the collection, I have become all the more stoked to see the stories and characters I fondly grew up with being covered in-depth via a God-pursuing lens, encouraging me to do the same. Looking forward to the fourth installment, Hector!

I truly enjoy these books by Mr. Miray. When I first met him, he was asking questions of regular people at the local Gamestop, for input on his book. Imagine that. Regular people, being part of something special. This book makes comparisons that are already obvious to the nerds among us, and brings attention to those that might be interested in the relationship that are possible when you simply open your eyes to comparison. When I read this book for the second time, I will update my review, as I often get a different perspective on my second read. I hope this review was helpful. If you have any questions, please do not hesitate to ask.

This author is a long time friend of mine and I love seeing the enthusiasm he has for God and for sharing God with others. Hector puts so much work into writing these books and then traveling to seemingly countless conventions throughout the year to share the vitally important truths about our God and Savior in a way that makes sense to any of us who enjoy anything geeky.

In this third volume the author continues to mine today's pop culture to lead readers to Christ. One stand out chapter the author draws parallels between the Star Wars sequel The Force Awakens and the disciples after Jesus's ascension.

Love reading this books and this one is probably the best! I love the Doctor Who and Star Wars chapters the best!
